BIOGRAPHY

Raul Alejandro Valencia Lemus, also known by his stage name Ale Valencia, is a 25-year-old Canadian singer, songwriter, and actor. Of Salvadorian origin, he was born in Montreal on August 11, 1999.

For the past two years, he has been making a name for himself on television with daily roles in the series Stat and Dumas on Radio-Canada. A special mention goes to his nomination in France at the Séries Mania Festival for the show Ça prend pas la tchas à Papineau, streamed on ICI TOU.TV, in which Raul Alejandro plays the leading role.

Musically, he is just as successful, with 2024 proving to be a breakthrough year. In the spring, he was the spokesperson for the Fuego Fuego festival. His song Ya Entendi was chosen as the theme song for Ça prend pas la tchas à Papineau. Ale Valencia's music has already amassed more than 500,000 streams.

His sound blends Latin urban and pop, weaving Montreal's underground culture into his music. With his Hispanic roots, Ale Valencia breaks cultural barriers by releasing songs in French, English, and Spanish, positioning himself as a pioneer of a new musical wave. Ya Entendi is a sensual bachata that went viral on TikTok, drawing new listeners from around the world. Closely connected to many local artists, he has collaborated with the well-known producer RuffSound, who has worked with stars such as Dua Lipa and Shakira. Their track Baila, featuring AZ and Day Vee, reached #98 on Quebec's Top 100 radio chart.

The Canadian singer embraces creativity in the sounds he crafts, producing music that transcends genres with youthful, vibrant melodies.

ICI Musique – Nouveaux sons
Mention by Nicolas Ouellet

“A must-see. When we talk about the public’s appetite for new TV, original stories, close to people, close to certain communities but not only, open to all Quebecers and with new faces, well, it fits 100% in there.”
— Eugénie Lépine-Blondeau, ICI Première, Tout un matin

“Ça prend pas la tchas à Papineau thus gives us a glimpse of the family in all its complexity, but also its beauty. Also noteworthy is the quality of the cast, composed of new faces like Raul Alejandro Valencia Lemus, Jaé Mac Lorin, and Samuel Robergeau in the roles of this father-son trio.”
— Amélie Revert, Le Devoir

“Jojo is a single father of two children whose mother has just died. He is portrayed by Alejandro Valencia Lemus who is so good and who touched me so much just with his gaze that it made me want to cry. There’s something in his acting that is completely vulnerable and in which we are so captivated.”
— Tatiana Polovoy, ICI Première, Il restera toujours la culture
